ATLANTA FALCON GRADY JACKSON FILES CLASS ACTION AGAINST NIKKI HASKELL'S STARCAPS FOR CONTAINING BUMETANIDE

Complaint Alleges Balanced Health Products and Nikki Haskell Violated California's Unfair Competition Laws

SAN FRANCISCO, California (November 10, 2008): Grady Jackson, through his longtime counsel Eric J. Farber at Pinnacle Law Group, LLP filed the first class action in the California Superior Court (Alameda County) in the country on behalf of himself and all others who purchased Nikki Haskell's StarCaps Diet Pills. The lawsuit against Balanced Health Products, the owner, manufacturer and distributor of StarCaps seeks to stop any further sale of StarCaps, for restitution and damages for false advertising and unfair business practices against the company as well as the retailers for the sale of StarCaps.

Although touted and labeled as an All Natural Diet pill, StarCaps actually contained Bumetanide, a powerful loop diuretic available only by prescription. Bumetanide is used for the treatment of edema associated with congestive heart failure, hepatic and renal disease. Bumetanide is on the NFL list of banned substances as diuretic masking agent. Grady Jackson and others were recently suspended by the Atlanta Falcon's for testing positive for Bumetanide. Being his first positive test, Jackson received a four game suspension. Jackson is appealing his suspension.

The lawsuit asks the court to stop the sale of StarCaps and warn other purchasers of the presence of the powerful loop diuretic as well as to afford restitution to all those who purchased StarCaps and for damages for any injuries caused by its use. The November/December 2007 issue of the Journal of Analytical Toxicology reported that a University of Utah study revealed the presence of Bumetanide in StarCaps at "almost therapeutic levels." Vol. 31, No.9.
